The Famine in Pennies The famine in pennies recently re-ported from various parts of the country is the mose surprising in view of the fact that the government coin-age of one-cent pieces has been much age of one-cent pieces has been much larger in recent years than in any earlier period of the history of the country A compilation by the National City bank of New York shows that more than one billion one-cent coins had been manufactured by the government and distributed to the peopenial during the last dozen years. government and distributed to the peo-people during the last dozen years. In fact the out-turn of one-cent piec-es in the last decade forms one-third of the total since the beginning of the present form of government.

The bank's statement on this subject shows that the number of one-cent coins manufactured by the mints of the United States from 1793 to the end of the fiscal year 1918 was 2,804,000, while the number issued in the last decade alone is, in round numbers one billion. Even in the single fiscal year 1916 the number of one-cent pieces coined was 101.230 317, while in the high record year 1910 he total number turned out was 152 846 218. The number of pieces coined never touched the 100,000 000 line prior to 1907, the total for that year being 108,138,618; and the annual average since that time has been nearly 100,000,000 per year.

The number of one-cent pieces coined from the beginning of the Government to date would, even if all were in existence or at least in circulation, each individual 27 one-cent pieces. Of course, the number actually available is far less than this for it is quite probable that out of the 2 3-4 billion one-cent pieces coined by the government not more than about 2 billions are now in exisence, or at least in circulation making the present average per capitalization. ta for all the people of the United States of about twenty one-cent pieces The coinage of one-cent pieces began with the first year's operation of the mints, the total number coined in the first period for which details are available (1793-5) having been 1,066.033. In that same period there were coined 142.524 half-cent pieces The halfent pieces seemed to gain in pop-

From that time on however the half-cent piece apparently lost popularity, for the mints soon suspend-ed their manufacture, though there were occasional issues of limited numwere occasional issues of limited num-bers down to 1860, at which time their coinage terminated. The number of one-cent pieces coined averaged less than 10 millions per annum down to about 1855 when there came a rapid increase, the number coined in 1857 being abou 18 millions, in 1860 over 20 millions, in 1864 53 millions. Followmillions, in 1864 53 millions. Following the close of the Civil War the number again greatly declined being in 1870 less than 6 millions, in 1880 39 millions in 1890 47 millions, in 1900 67 millions in 1906 36 millions, crossing the 100 million line in 1907, and making the highest record in 1910, 152 218 the highest record in 1910—152,218—while the total for the fiscal year 1916 was 101,230,317.

All the one-cent pieces now issued by the government are of bronze. In copper, then for a comparatively short time of nickel, though the proportion which the copper or nickel coins formed of the total is very small, the en-tire number of copper one-cent coins issued having been 156 289,000, nickel

The "minor coinage" of the United States, including in that term the half-cent, one-cent, two-cent, three-cent and five-cent coins, aggregates about 4 billions in number. Of the about 4 billions in number. Of the one-cent coins the number as already indicated is about 2800,000,000,000, of which about 200,000,000 were nickel and 156,000,000 copper; of the two-cent coins there were issued 45,501,000; of the hree-cent coins 31,378,000 made of nickel and 42,770,000 made of silver; and of the five-cent pieces the total number issued has been of nickel 891,813,000 and of silver 97,604,000.

All "token" coins issued by the government are now of bronze or nickel, all of the one-cent pieces being of bronze, all of the five-cent pieces nickel The use of silver for the manufacture of minor coins was discontinued in 1874.

The face value of the "token" coins

The face value of the "token" coins issued by the government (theone-cent pieces and five-cent nickels) is of course much greater than the value of the metal which they contain. In fact, the profit on the manufacture of these coins together with a slight profit on the manufacture of the minor silver coins (ten, twenty-five and fifty-cent pieces) is more than enough to pay the running expenses of the mint.
